

Window treatments FOR EVERY ROOM

The window and wall treatments you choose for your child's bedroom will determine how well the room adapts through the years. These two bedrooms offer different looks, but both promise design longevity. The green-and-red toile wallcovering paired with green-and-white gingham valance below, for example, are both updated classics. It's a look that can grow from toddler through the teen years. And although the bedroom opposite is especially playful with its larger-than-life motifs and accents, the soft sheers at the window and colorful quilt on the bed can easily transition as the occupant ages. Even the oversize painted wall flowers might tantalize a teen.
